multi-disciplinary academic hub for the conduct of biomedical research, education, and training in the area of prostate cancer.

The Specialized Program of Research Excellence in Prostate Cancer (SPORE) was established to:

- establish a multi-disciplinary leadership at Johns Hopkins
- establish a mentoring and support system for promising new investigators in the area of prostate cancer
- initiate and support a comprehensive cancer center focused on the prevention, detection, and treatment of prostate cancer
- maintain and strengthen the national infrastructure for the conduct of prostate cancer research

The Baltimore SPORE Prostate Cancer Detection and Prevention Research Program seeks to integrate epidemiology, molecular biology, and basic and translational research to identify biomarkers and characterize the genetic and environmental factors associated with the development of prostate cancer, specifically with the aim of developing improved diagnostic and preventative measures and treatment for this disease. The Johns Hopkins Morgan Welch Inflammatory Bowel and Liver Disease Research Center (MWIFLDC) is a collaborative research program, focused on the basic mechanisms underlying the intestinal and liver involvement in various forms of inflammatory bowel diseases (IBD). This program includes experimental studies into the pathogenesis of IBD, directed at elucidation of the mechanisms of cellular injury and development of new strategies for the prevention and treatment of the disease. The MWIFLDC performs investigations that will further define the basis of the cellular immune responses that contribute to the intestinal and liver damage in IBD. These studies will also identify new treatment strategies and seek to find new biomarkers for the diagnosis and treatment of these diseases. The Johns Hopkins
